

Notes for this version

Rev. James Wilson MA completed a survey of the inscriptions at Caldbeck in 1896 and his records were published in a small book entitled MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS IN THE CHURCH AND CHURCHYARD OF CALDBECK, CUMBERLAND. by William R. Beck in 1897.

Caldbeck & District Local History Society (C&DLHS) undertook another survey in the early 1990s, which they completed and published as MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS IN THE CHURCH AND CHURCHYARD OF ST KENTIGERN'S CALDBECK CUMBRIA in 1996.

Initially annual updates were provided as addenda but in 2000 a revised edition was published, with all the additional monuments included. This pdf document relates to this revised edition.

There have been a significant number of burials and/or inscriptions since the year 2000 and it is hoped that another revised edition will be produced in due course by C&DLHS. Meanwhile we hope that these records will be of interest.

Please note that the Greensleaves Bookshop at Priests Mill, referred to on the reverse side of the title page, closed down a few years ago. Caldbeck & District Local History Society can be contacted via the Caldbeck village website:

PREFACE

The churchyards which surround our parish churches in England are very special places and there is a welcome renewal of interest in them which augurs well for their future as we approach the end of this century.

A churchyard is not merely a place where the dead are buried - it is part of the religious landscape as well as the physical and historical scene. Death is the one total certainty in this life for each of us and life in this world is incomplete without it. The rows of tombstones and graves in a churchyard such as this at Caldbeck speak of man's faith in the grace of God in whom we are born, in whom we live and in whom we die. Through the churchyard we are carried at the beginning of our lives for baptism; through it we walk to greater and lesser occasions in our life; through it we are again carried on our last great journey as we return to the dust from whence we came. It speaks of the inexorable order of creation and our place in it for eternity.

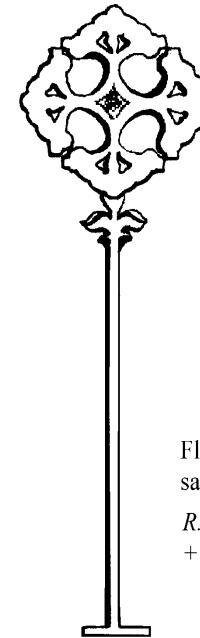

The churchyard belongs to the whole community of the parish and not simply to those who worship in the church week by week. The present generation is judged by the way in which it cares for the resting place of its ancestors. Thankfully today we have managed to arrest the tendency to turn what is properly called 'God's Acre' into a replica of a suburban garden with neatly manicured lawns from which gravestones have been banished to more easily accommodate the lawn mower. Caldbeck Churchyard is and I trust will always remain a good honest rural churchyard, bounded by sturdy trees and strong walls, a home not only to the dead but to the living where humans, animals and birds can find peace and security.

There is one final thing that makes a churchyard like ours special - at its centre stands not a ruin nor an ancient monument open to visitors, but a much loved and cared-for Church which is the living, beating heart of the Christian community who meet within its walls and who go out from it to carry the good news of God's love into his world. It is a place of worship for some day by day or week by week. For others it is the place where the happiest and saddest moments of our lives are touched by God and where we glimpse his glory and his love. The memorials both inside and outside the Church which are recorded in this book not only tell the history of our parish for the last 300 years or more; they reflect what people have felt about death and bereavement; what craftsmen have felt about design and expression and how taste and fashion in memorials has changed over the years.

This excellent survey by the Caldbeck and District Local History Society of the Monumental Inscriptions in Caldbeck Church and Churchyard will be of immense value to all who are interested in the history of a Cumbrian fell community. Much has happened since James Wilson produced the first such survey in 1897 with the help of William Oldcorn, the Parish Clerk. Many people have contributed to this latest work - most of them are members of the Society. Many spent arduous evenings, often in unfriendly weather, deciphering and recording partly obliterated inscriptions. I am glad to be able to record our thanks to them all. Through their hard work and diligence, the memorials of Caldbeck Churchyard and the story that they tell will be secure for another hundred years.

INTRODUCTION

This publication lists all the inscriptions now visible on gravestones and other memorials outside and inside the church, together with those which are now illegible or have completely disappeared but are recorded in:

Monumental Inscriptions in the Church and Churchyard of Caldbeck, Cumberland.
Edited by James Wilson. Dalston WR Beck 1897.

The inscriptions

These have been transcribed as faithfully as possible, except that lower-case has been used for all material other than the names of PEOPLE and PLACES. Also each additional name to be remembered is given a separate line. Where the lettering has become indistinct or illegible the wording has been copied from that of the 1897 List.

Type of gravestone

Most of the memorials are simple headstones of local stone, but to assist with identification attention has been drawn to distinctive features such as shape (eg "Cross") or material (eg "Polished marble"). No attempt has been made at complete consistency.

Reference system (see plan inside front cover).

In order to indicate the exact location of the gravestones each has been given a reference number (eg WA:9). Most of the graves lie in the two main sections of the churchyard:

East churchyard: lying to the right of the main path approaching the church:
Rows EA to ER.

West churchyard: lying to the left of the main path:
Rows WA to WE to the south of the Old Rectory path;
Rows WF to WL to the north of the Old Rectory path.

It should be stressed that some of the rows are extremely capricious and can only be recognized as rows with the eye of faith. The best way to identify these gravestones is to follow carefully the numbers in the list, making use of such landmarks as trees* and some of the larger gaps which are recorded. The stones are numbered from the south.

* A tree is indicated by the symbol

The following references are also used:

Around church (AR): these are stones and other memorials lying within the path immediately to the south of the church and also those attached to the walls. The numbering is from west to east.

Inside church (IN): these are memorials inside the church numbered clockwise from the baptistery.

War Memorial and main gate (WM)

Untraced (UT): these are inscriptions recorded in the 1897 List which cannot now be traced, either because they have become completely illegible or because the stones have broken up or been removed.

Numbers in square brackets eg [56] refer to the numbers given in the 1897 List.

Note that all names and dates are those actually inscribed on the stones and may vary from details given in the Burial Registers held by Cumbria Archive Services.

All memorials erected by the summer of 1994 have been included. It is planned to issue addendum lists from time to time. The editors would be glad to hear of any errors or omissions.

In addition to the 1996 lists this January 2000 revised edition contains details of all memorials erected between the summer of 1994 and October 1999 as well as minor corrections and an updated index.

In him the Family became extinct which he did not endeavour to prevent by Marriage. As a Divine he was pious, as a Friend constant, as a Citizen candid and just. The churchyard of Caldbeck, which lies to the south of the church, has been extended as far as the public road in recent years, by the taking in of a considerable piece of roadside waste or common which adjoined it. In former times a footpath ran through the churchyard along the garden wall from the village to the church bridge, but a stone wall now shuts off the path from the churchyard. Care has been taken to keep this road for foot passengers only, as without doubt it is a part of consecrated ground and the place of frequent burial. The parish school occupied the portion of the yard to the east of the church. The inscription over the door—Ex dono Roberti Vaux de Brownrigg, A.D. 1688—which provoked the merriment of Bishop Nicolson, now finds a home as a cottage lintel in the village. The massive base and socket of the old Caldbeck cross remains as of yore by the walk near the south entrance of the church. Why a fitting shaft should not be added and the sacred monument restored to something like its former position nobody can tell.

The monuments present few features of special interest. There is an unaccountable absence of early tombstones, none of the 17th and few of the 18th century surviving. The stones of the Vaux family of Brownrigg have disappeared since their inscriptions were copied for Hutchinson at the close of the last century. The legend around the east window of the church and the date-stone on the corn mill hard by the churchyard are rapidly perishing and will soon be as illegible as the Wybergh coat of arms and motto over the side-gate of the Rectory. The writing on the arcade within the church, telling the date of the building of the tower and the names of the churchwardens, has been inadvertently covered with whitewash and is not now visible. It is satisfactory to learn that all the inscriptions known to have existed are carefully preserved at the Rectory, thus remedying as far as possible the ravages of time on the soft perishable stone of the district. This custom was first commenced, much to his credit be it said, by the late Rector, the Rev. James Thwaites, and is continued by his successor in the benefice.

The best known inscription in Caldbeck is that on the tombstone of John Peel, the famous Cumbrian huntsman, whose name is a familiar one in that district. The symbols of his craft are duly emblazoned on the monument. Next to this perhaps may come "the beauty of Buttermere," who was the victim of a cruel fraud for which the penalty of death was awarded and carried out at Carlisle in the beginning of this century. Three stones display coats of arms, Bell, Ralton and Scott, the two latter being of some local interest. We are glad to record that the orientation of burials is still continued in this parish in common with the ancient churchyards of the country and according to the historic practice of the Christian church.

These inscriptions were copied in June 1896 during a visit to the Rectory and parish on the invitation of the Rev. W. F. Simpson the present incumbent, to whom the thanks of all interested in genealogical pursuits are due for his permission to print the necrology of his parishioners. It is also due to Mr. William Oldcorn, the esteemed parish clerk and one of the most efficient of his vocation, to testify to the sympathy he showed in this undertaking. Had it not been for his help in the scrubbing of tombstones some of these inscriptions could not have been read. To the Rev. Loftus Lumb who assisted in many ways and to Mr. W. R. Beck who has printed the booklet at his own risk due acknowledgement should be made.
